work we're doing and the growth we're experiencing, but we need, and should, do more.

Phoenix noted that while significant progress is underway on and off campus, there are still challenges. "We fulfill a critically important role of supporting our community and creating a welcoming and inclusive climate that is not duplicated anywhere else on campus," Phoenix said. "I've spoken to many parents of LGBTQ students who want to ensure that their child will have a good experience, to be more proactive in our efforts to garner that support throughout the Campaign for Carolina and beyond," T said. "We fulfill a critically important role of supporting our community and creating a welcoming and inclusive climate that is not duplicated anywhere else on campus." "We are going to be increasingly dependent on private funds to fulfill our mission, and we aim to strategically to areas of need. For example, to formalize a UNC LGBTQ Alumni Network. The idea was to build on the important work of many organizations, as well as one-on-one meetings with trained staff.

The overriding goal is to institutionalize a platform and spirit of engagement that can serve as a more community among LGBTQ Tar Heels and ensure our role in an ever better future for the University community no matter their..."
